More charges are filed against Agriprocessors as employees still not paid; volunteers host Thanksgiving meal for displaced workers and their families

Thanksgiving feast for those in need

A group of volunteers hosted a Thanksgiving dinner at Turner Hall for displaced workers and their families at Agriprocessors, Inc. on Thanksgiving Day. Turner Hall has been designated as the site for workers to come and talk to various organizations about energy assistance, clothing needs, case management and other concerns. Here a young boy fills his plate. He was one of over 100 people who enjoyed the traditional turkey dinner.

The latest charges against Agriprocessors, Inc. involve nonpayment to livestock growers. A court motion was filed last Monday, November 24 against Agriprocessors, Inc. by livestock and poultry sellers for nonpayment to livestock producers. The motion was filed by a U. S. attorney in New York.

In an unusual related action, the United States district attorney for the Eastern District of New York is asking that the Agriprocessors bankruptcy case be sent to Iowa.

According to a statute which is known as the "Packers and Stockyard Act", the plant is required by law to meet strict pay-

Radio board hears much praise for station manager

A crowd of over thirty attended the board of directors meeting of KPVL Radio Postville last Wednesday. Among those in attendance were displaced workers from Agriprocessors, Inc., clergy, community volunteers and native Postvillians. When asked by the press, they all reiterated that they were at the meeting to show support for station manager Jeff Abbas and the relief efforts he has provided for those affected by the closing of Agriprocessors.

Shortly after Board President Dave Hjortland called the meeting to order, Abbas was asked to give the manager's report.

He spoke about an impending power increase at the station and the steps that need to take place for this to happen.

However, it was his explanation of the events which took place at the station concerning the workers at the plant which caused the audience to applaud.

He said he took it upon himself to help those in need of food and shelter as they had no place else to go. He added that people immediately showed up with food and clothing and, because many did not have electricity, he and the countless volunteers who showed up, began providing hot meals. Abbas, who said he contacted the City officials immediately about the crisis, Booster Club to meet next Wed.

The Postville Athletic Booster Club will meet Wednesday, December 10 at 7 p.m. in the Mott Lobby of the High School. All members are urged to attend.

Postville School District patrons asked to approve state sales tax revenue purpose statement

Members of the Postville Community School District were slated to go to the polls Tuesday, December 2. The vote was to determine placing a state sales tax revenue purpose statement to the school district's sales tax already in effect. This vote in no way increases the current tax rate.

Many school districts in our area have already approved their revenue purpose statements. This vote expands what the school option tax can be spent on, such as technology. This money can never be spent on salaries, benefits, or general operating expenses within the school district. The measure has been endorsed by the Postville Board of Education.

The polls were to be open at the Multicultural Center from noon to 8 p.m.

Election results will be published in next week's edition of the Herald-Leader.

District patrons are reminded this is not a new tax.

Community receptions to be held for superintendent candidates

The Postville Community School has been searching for a new Superintendent of Schools for the upcoming school year.

The school is asking that members of the community attend the receptions for each candidate who is interviewed.

Tentatively, the first interview and community reception has been set for December 11. The exact time and location will be posted on the sign at FreedomBank.

ment schedules when purchasing livestock and poultry from local growers and sellers who are protected against non-payment by a trust fund set up by law. The Department of Agriculture is responding by verifying claims under the law.

Although Aaron Rubashkin, owner of Agriprocessors lives in New York, that alone is not enough to keep the bankruptcy case in New York. This action is explained in motions which were filed not only by the United States Government, but also by the company's creditors. It is the opinion of these entities that the hearing should, indeed, be transferred to Postville where the plant is located.

Trucks repossessed

In other action, Agriprocessors trucks have also been repossessed. Some of the company's trucks and trailers were repossessed last weekend from the homes of its drivers. When some of the trucks were taken without the drivers being notified, several feared that they had been stolen. One driver, Don Baade, added that he had over $1,000 worth of personal items inside his cab.

Employees have also filed complaints that insurance claims have not been paid. Bud Brink, who is also a truck driver for the company, had ankle replacement surgery in July and insurance still hasn't paid. According to the Brinks, the bills for the surgery are in excess of $40,000. The insurance premiums were, however, still being taken out of the employees' paychecks each pay period until they stopped getting paid altogether.

Other drivers have been stranded on the road when the company credit cards are refused for purchases of fuel.

Along with all the above mentioned problems, drivers and other employees inside Agriprocessors have been without pay for several weeks.

Closure affects kosher food supply

With the Agriprocessors meat packing plant completely shut down here for the past several weeks, Kosher food shortages are becoming a looming problem for Postville's Jewish community as well as the displaced workers who are Postville natives.

The Postvillians and immigrants from around the world have been helped by the local food bank, churches and a temporary shelter which was organized by Jeff Abbas of the local radio station.

said it took them eleven days to respond.

Abbas also addressed the issue of notifying law enforcement about the threat that came into the station which was presented to local businesses and schools concerning the possibility of robberies. He said that at no time was the information broadcast over the air. His decision to release the information, he said, was for the safety of the community.

Following the remainder of the agenda items, the board took comments from the floor. All in attendance who spoke praised Abbas and his volunteers for stepping up to the plate and providing a service to those in need instantly. One volunteer said if he (Abbas) used city property (the Multi-cultural Center) without getting the proper clearance it was only to help those in need and no malice was intended.

Another member of the audience, who identified himself as Cookie Anderson, said that Abbas has single-handedly kept the station going as he works hundreds of hours each week without pay.

When asked, Board members confirmed the fact that Abbas has not been paid for several months due to the radio station's financial difficulties. Members of the community were urged to donate to the station and become Community Radio Station members.

Prior to going into closed session, Board members made it clear that they were proud of Jeff's humanitarian effort and they were not there to persecute his actions.

The Jewish population received a reprieve when they received a truckload of kosher food from Beth Jacob Congregation in Mendota Heights, Minn.

Speaking on behalf of the Jewish community in Postville, Mordy Brown, who manages the Kosher Community Grocery said, "Presently, very few Jewish people have left the area and many are feeling the pressure of not being able to feed their children; thus, making the donations very welcome."

Brown added that food not used by the Jewish community was sent to the Postville Food Pantry.

Pastor Steve Brackett of St. Paul Lutheran Church said, "The people of Postville are all quite proud and it is hard for them to accept charity but it has finally come to the point where they had no choice."

It had been announced that paychecks would be issued this Monday, December 1 and killing would resume; yet, as of presstime that had not happened.
